

A Doll's Debut

Original Barbie dolls in mint condition are worth $25,000.

Ruth Handler watched her daughter ignore baby dolls in favor of playing with paper dolls of adult women. Handler realized that some young girls did not want to play mother to babies, but rather they wanted to use their imaginations to envision their futures as adults through play. Handler's solution was to introduce a new doll to the market. On March 9, 1959, Barbie made her debut at the American Toy Fair in New York City, and her popularity has endured for nearly 65 years.

Handler based her design, a slim 11-inch-tall woman with wavy blonde hair and a full feminine figure, on a German doll named Lilli. Lilli was first introduced not as a doll for German girls, but as a bold and quick-witted woman in a newspaper comic strip geared toward men. Lilli's popularity grew so much that she became a toy for children. Handler discovered Lilli on a visit to Germany. She brought the doll home, made a few changes, a visit to Germany. She brought the doll home, made a few changes, and named her Barbie after her own daughter Barbara. Handler, founder of the Mattel toy company, utilized a sponsorship deal she had signed with The Mickey Mouse Club to advertise the doll on television to children. In its first year on the market, 300,000 Barbie dolls were sold.

As popular as Barbie has been, though, she has always generated plenty of controversy. Barbie's careers as an executive and astronaut were viewed as challenging women's traditional roles. Her unrealistic figure (a holdover from the Lilli age) has been criticized as perpetuating negative body images for young girls. Regardless, Barbie has weathered these storms, bringing in one billion dollars for Mattel each year.

FROM THE OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Harrison House of Chester County is so excited to announce that Stacy Yosko, our Director of Residents Services was awarded Woman of Distinction for 2023. This award is so well deserved for all her dedicated work at Harrison House over the last 30 years! Well, it is March and for some reason we still have not seen any amount of snow to talk about. Not sure if this is a good thing or not. It always makes me smile to see some of those large flakes come down on our tree line. Well soon our flowering trees out front will be budding and spring will be here.

Our Non Medical Home Health has started, so if anyone is in need of these services please contact me for more information. In the near future I am planning to have a family night to meet your family and friends. We will have some snacks and you will be able to meet our CEO, Harrison Saunders and COO, Frank Beech. We will have plenty of time for questions and answers. I am looking forward to seeing everyone.
